

Lautaro G. Colazo 'User Manual'

Key points

▼ My style

My style is to carry out every task always with a previous plan and try to look for the most productive and efficient way possible to do everything. My final goal is to do everything as quickly as possible without losing quality in the final result.

▼ What I value

Even though I value logic and structured things, the aspects that I value the most are humbleness, charity, honesty, and hard-working.

I think that those are the fundamentals to achieving greatness

At the same time, I consider that if you want to have massive success, professionally speaking, you have to focus on your strengths rather than on your weaknesses

▼ Best time to approach me

In the morning after my morning routine. I normally tend to turn off all my devices and not check them until my work is done.

Also in the evening would be a good idea

▼ How best to communicate with me

The best way to communicate with me is a direct way, being precise, and with arguments on what they are saying.

By direct I don't mean brutal honest or offensive but to be clear and concise. Also, I would like to receive reasons as a backup to your petition, proposal, or plan. That will help me to understand things better, and provide you with more value as well.

▼ How do you make decisions?

I tend to analyze things best as I can. Most of the time is not possible, but I like to have a solid plan in order to take a decision.

▼ What people misunderstand about me

Normally, what people misunderstand are my strictness and endeavors to do things the best that I can. They think that I apply my strictness for selfish purposes, but in reality, I am just trying to do what I understand is right or correct.

▼ How to help me

You can help me by giving me all the feedback that you can, being direct, but with a proposal of how I can improve.
